Should we consider the expiration process a pharmaceutical manufacturing stroke of genius to get people to update their medications earlier than is necessary? If so, is it all because this means more money in the old corporate pocket? Do their marketing people really feel it is necessary to periodically update the packaging that may have the same ingredients as the old label did? Is there a justifiable reason to clean out the medicine chest on an annual basis and check expiration dates as we do on that quart of milk in the refrigerator? We can all ponder the process over dinner tonight
